

Introduction to

Archival Organization and Description

Michael J. Fox
Peter L. Wilkerson

Edited by Susanne R. Warren

Getty Information Institute

Contents

v	Foreword
vii	Introduction
1	Part I Archival Principles, Archival Practices
2	Archival Documentation <ul style="list-style-type: none">What Is Documentation?Why Document?What Does Archival Documentation Involve?
5	Archival Materials and Information <ul style="list-style-type: none">The Nature of Archival InformationPrinciples of Archival DocumentationArchival Materials: How Characteristics Shape Practices
11	Part II Archival Analysis, Archival Description
12	Gathering and Analyzing Archival Information <ul style="list-style-type: none">Assembling DocumentationWhat Information Is Collected?
18	Archival Description <ul style="list-style-type: none">Description: Conveying Information to UsersDescriptive ToolsArchival Information Systems: Delivering the Goods
26	Standards for Archival Description <ul style="list-style-type: none">About StandardsDifferent Types of Information Standards

29	Descriptive Standards for Finding Aids Descriptive Standards for Catalog Records Descriptive Standards for Inventories/Registers
33	Part III Putting It All Together: How an Archivist Works
34	Archival Processing What Is Processing? Gathering and Analyzing Information Organization and Arrangement Creating Descriptions in the Form of Catalog Records and Inventories/Registers
39	Part IV What's Ahead in Description and Access
40	The Future
42	Tutorial: An over-the-shoulder view of an archivist at work
49	Glossary
52	Acronyms
53	Bibliography
56	Web Resources