One of the most interesting works was a framed drawing of a crucified Christ by Alonso Cano (no. 72), an artist renowned for his skill as a draughtsman. Moreno de Villodas also owned a set of six flowerpieces on the theme of the Life of the Virgin, which were probably garlands surrounding figurative scenes (no. 83). The flowers were painted by the flower specialist Gabriel de la Corte, and the figures by “Antolinez”, most probably referring to Corte’s contemporary, Don Francisco Ochoa y Antolínez. It is worth noting that these works were less highly valued than a pair of flowerpieces on copper by the Flemish artist Jan Philip van Thielen (no. 12). Francisco Antolínez was surely also the author of four landscapes in the collection (no. 34), and Palomino noted his expertise in this field. These landscapes were listed directly after another group of four landscapes by Andrés Smidt (no. 33), a German artist at the court of Charles II, which is further evidence of the widespread activity of landscape painting among Madrid painters. Other Spanish painters mentioned in the document were Luis de Morales (nos. 5, 15), El Greco (no. 6) and Juan de Roelas (no. 9), as well as painters of the next century, Carreño de Miranda (no. 37) and Escalante (no. 42). The works of Murillo were highly sought after by this date, and Moreno de Villodas owned a copy of a painting of the Virgin and Child with St. Anne copied by Jerónimo Antonio Ezquerro (no. 46).

Some of the foreign artists named in the document are difficult to identify today (nos. 28, 29, 39). It is not surprising, however, that works attributed to Venetian old masters were among the most valuable in the collection; thus a damaged painting of the Last Supper from the school of Titian was valued at 2,800 reales (no. 3). Two paintings by the Bassano family were also highly valued (nos. 4, 36), especially the Forge of Vulcan by Leandro Bassano, worth 5,000 reales (no. 4). One of the most intriguing paintings in the collection, from a documentary point of view, was a self-portrait of Tintoretto (no. 8).

Bernarda Sarmiento de Valladares y Guzmán, Duquesa de Atrisco, Marquesa de Valladares, and Dama de la Reina, died on 26 August 1752. She had been married first to Felix López de Ayala Velasco y Cárdenas, Conde de Fuensalida, and was the widow by second marriage to Melchor de Solís y Gante Osorio y Sarmiento. The postmortem inventory and valuation of her goods took place in Madrid between 11 September and 23 October, 1752, with her paintings valued on 12 September 1752 by Pedro Rodríguez Miranda, painter.

This was evidently a fine and extensive picture collection, but only a small number of paintings were attributed. The most valuable of the paintings by a Spanish hand was the portrait of the Inquisitor General Diego Sarmiento de Valladares painted by Juan Carreño de Miranda (no. 74), a painting which is perhaps identifiable with the portrait of a seated cleric in Toledo, Hospital Tavera, Fundación Medinaceli.<sup>1</sup> However, the most highly valued works by far were a St. Jerome by Albrecht Dürer (no. 49), worth a staggering 22.000 reales, and four large paintings by Luca Giordano (nos. 1, 3, 12), worth a total of 34.000 reales.

Joaquín Ignacio de Barnachea, Vizconde de Encinar and Marqués del Puerto

1753

Joaquín Ignacio de Barrenechea, a knight of the Order of Alcántara, served in the household of Queen Isabel de Farnese and was a Gentilhombre de cámara of the king and a member of his Council of Finance. He was Vizconde de Encinar and was made Marqués del Puerto in 1741, when Philip V sent him as extraordinary ambassador to Sweden. Fernando VI made him ambassador to Holland and he died at The Hague on 10 March 1753. His postmortem estate inventory was drawn up by Juan Bautista de Ayerita on the authority of the son, Fernando Barrenechea, Marqués de Salana, and begun in Madrid on 26 March 1753. The paintings were valued by the royal painter Andrés de la Calleja on 26 March 1753 and were sold in the estate sale which began a year later, on 26 March 1754.

This collection was noteworthy for the presence of paintings from the Neapolitan school. Some of the paintings were listed anonymously (nos. 27, 28, 37), but there was a group of nine still life paintings by the Recco family (nos. 9, 13, 23, 24), five pictures by Giacomo Farelli (nos. 8, 10), and a Mary Magdalene from the school of Massimo Stanzione (no. 4). Some of the other unidentified authors in this collection were evidently Italian painters, perhaps also working in Naples (nos. 25, 32, 35). Unusually, only one painting was attributed to a Spanish artist, a landscape by the Mallorcan specialist Pedro Cotto (no. 40). This was associated with a pair of landscapes by Andrés Smidt, the German artist active at the court of Charles II (no. 49), by whom works were also listed in the contemporary collection of Julián Moreno de Villodas (Doc. 137). A painting by Luca Giordano (no. 30), was also present and presumably had been painted by the artist while living in Spain.

Joseph Gómez de Terán was a member of the royal Council of Finance, the Consejo de Hacienda, whose title of Marqués de Portago was conceded on 18 September 1743. On his death, his estate was partitioned between his children Juana García de la Madriz, Marquesa de Portago, and Andrés Saturnino Gómez de Terán. The lengthy document was finished and signed on 1 October 1755. The Marquesa de Portago inherited the entire collection of paintings listed in the cuero de hacienda.

The most notable aspect of this collection inventory is the presence of attributed paintings from the minor genres. It included, for instance, a pair of battles by Micco Spadaro (no. 34), and eighteen battle paintings by Jacques Courtois (nos. 7, 8, 33, 43, 44, 53, 54, 62). There were examples of seascapes attributed to Jan Brueghel (nos. 21, 63), a flowerpiece (no. 39) and a group of four landscapes attributed generically to "one of the Brueghels" (no. 45). There were also Italian still lifes (no. 55) and ten works specified as of the Roman school (nos. 5, 32, 49, 61), as well as eight flowerpieces by Mario Nuzzi (nos. 22, 23, 25) and two flowerpieces on slate by an artist listed only by her nickname, "La Milanese" (no. 47). Spanish still life and flower painters were also represented; there were four flowerpieces by Bartolomé Pérez (nos. 13, 38) and still lifes by Antonio de Pereda (nos. 26, 30) and that most elusive and sought-after artist Juan Fernández "El Labrador" (nos. 20, 37). One of his paintings painted on panel depicted nuts and hazelnuts. However, the most highly valued Spanish paintings were two devotional images which appear at the head of the list, a Christ Carrying the Cross by Luis de Morales (no. 1) and a painting of the Virgin by Murillo (no. 2), which may have been hung as pendants.

LIST OF ARTIST
APPRAISERS

Notes on the List of Artist Appraisers

The artist appraiser's name in the first column is followed by names of persons whose collections he appraised, along with the year of the appraisal – generally made for an estate sale (almoneda) or partition (particion). This index consists of documents deposited in the Archivo Histórico de Protocolos in Madrid of which photocopies or transcriptions have been made that may be consulted at the Getty Provenance Index. For ease of reference, the Getty Provenance Index-assigned inventory number is given in the last column. For the AHPM call number, see the List of Spanish Inventories available at the Getty Provenance Index.

LIST OF SPANISH INVENTORIES AVAILABLE AT THE GETTY PROVENANCE INDEX

Notes on the List of Spanish Inventories available at the Getty Provenance Index

The Spanish inventories listed here include collections of paintings and are available in some form at the Getty Provenance Index. They have been organized alphabetically by the name of the collector with profession and marital affiliations. This information is followed by the date and city of the inventory; archive location and call number; and Provenance Index-assigned inventory number. For those inventories transcribed in this publication, the document number is given in lieu of the archive call number.

The majority of these documents are deposited in the Archivo Histórico de Protocolos in Madrid. This archive name is abbreviated "AHPM" in citations giving the location of the documents. Other archives cited are: the Archivo Histórico Nacional in Madrid, "AHNM," the Archivo de la Casa Alba, Palacio de Liria in Madrid, "ACAM," and the Archivo Histórico de Protocolos in Valladolid, "AHPV."
