Biographical / Historial Note

The German photographer Albert Renger-Patzsch (1897 -1966) was born in Würzburg, Bavaria, and died in Wamel near Soest, Westphalia. Son of amateur photographer Robert Renger-Patzsch, he learned the techniques of photography early. Following primary education in Sondeshausen in Thuringia, Albert Renger-Patzsch attended the renowned Kreuzgymnasium in Dresden. After service in the German Army between 1916 and 1918, he studied chemistry at the Technische Hochschule in Dresden from 1919 to 1921.

His professional career as a photographer began in the early 1920s at the Folkwang Verlag in Essen, and at the Folkwang and Auriga Archiv in Hagen, where he was the head of photographic services. In 1923, he served as head of a photographic service agency in Berlin. In that same year, he married Agnes von Braunschweig and moved briefly to Kronstadt (Brasov) in Romania. His daughter Sabine was born in 1924, his son Ernst Normann in 1926. In 1924 Renger-Patzsch returned briefly to Darmstadt to work at the Auriga Verlag, the successor of the Folkwang Verlag. In 1925 he left the Auriga Verlag to become a freelance photographer, joined the Deutscher Werkbund, and moved with his family to Bad Harzburg, near Braunschweig. His first exhibition was mounted in his studio.

Between 1924 and 1937, Renger-Patzsch collaborated on several book projects, including the series Die Welt der Pflanze, conceived by Ernst Fuhrmann (volumes Crassula and Orchideen, both 1924). Other project partners included Rudolf Schwarz (Wegweisung der Technik, 1928), Carl Georg Heise (Lübeck, 1928), and the Auriga Verlag (Das Chorgestühl von Kappenberg, 1925). His influential book Die Welt ist schön appeared in 1928, published by Kurt Wolff Verlag in Munich; the Einhorn Verlag edition followed in the same year. In 1927, Carl Georg Heise organized an exhibition of Renger-Patzsch's photographic work at the Behnhaus in Lübeck. In 1928, Renger-Patzsch participated in the exhibition Kunst und Technik at the Museum Folkwang in Essen; he also held two individual exhibitions, one at the Kunstgewerbemuseum in Zurich and another at the Grafisches Kabinett in Munich.

In 1929 Renger-Patzsch moved with his family to Essen, where he had a studio and office at the Museum Folkwang. During this time he worked intensively with the industrial architect Fritz Schupp, and made architectural photographs for the architect and director of the Kunstgewerbeschule Aachen, Rudolf Schwarz. The first retrospective exhibition of his work took place in 1931 at the Museum Folkwang in Essen. His industrial photographs, published in the book Eisen und Stahl (1931), won a silver medal at the Milan Triennale in 1933. During 1933, Renger-Patzsch lectured at the Folkwang School in Essen, and took over the chair of photography from Max Burchartz.

Between 1938 and 1940, Renger-Patzsch received his first commissions from the chemical concern C. H. Boehringer Sohn in Ingelheim: Hospitalbauten in Europa aus zehn Jahrhunderten (first issued in 1967), a book about hospital buildings in Europe with text by Dankwart Leistikow, and Historische Apotheken Deutschlands (year of issue unknown), a book about historical pharmacies. During the years 1941 to 1944, Renger-Patzsch worked on the book projects Paderborn (first issued in 1949) and Land am Oberrhein (appearing in 1944 in small edition). In 1943, he was commissioned by the Todt Organization to take pictures of the Western defences of the German forces in Normandy and Brittany. A large part of Renger-Patzsch's archive in the Museum Folkwang was destroyed during an air raid on Essen in 1944. Shortly afterwards Renger-Patzsch moved with his family to Wamel on the Möhnesee, near Soest, where he lived for the remainder of his life.

Beständige Welt, a small volume with landscape photographs with text by Helene Henze, initiated his post-war work in 1947. The year 1949 marked the start of long-term commission work for the firm Schubert & Salzer, a spinning machine manufacturer in Ingolstadt, as well as the continuation of work begun in 1932 for the glass manufacturer Jenaer Glaswerk Schott & Gen., and the firm C. H. Boehringer Sohn in Ingelheim. He also undertook commissions for the architects Fritz Schupp in Essen and Hans Schwippert in Düsseldorf. The Siepman Werke in Belecke commissioned Renger-Patzsch to produce two publications: Bilder aus der Landschaft zwischen Ruhr und Möhne (1957) and Bauten zwischen

Ruhr und Möhne (1959). During the 1950s and 1960s Renger-Patzsch collaborated with the publisher Mocker & Jahn in Soest on the book projects Schloss Cappenberg (1953) and Soest (1963); he received commissions from numerous industrial companies in Germany. He also traveled throughout Europe, with several trips to Italy for the book project Hohenstaufenburgen in Südtalien (1961). This book, with text by Hanno Hahn, was commissioned by the firm C. H. Boehringer Sohn, which also commissioned the books Bäume (1962) and Gestein (1966), both with text by Ernst Jünger. A professional relationship developed between Renger-Patzsch and the German dendrologist Wolfgang Haber, who accompanied Renger-Patzsch on his trips to Italy and wrote texts for Im Wald (1965) and Bäume.

During the postwar years Renger-Patzsch lectured on photography throughout Germany. His photographic work was recognized and awarded. In 1957, the Gesellschaft Deutscher Lichtbildner honored Renger-Patzsch with the David Octavius Hill Medal. In 1960, he received the prestigious culture prize of the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Photographie. In 1961, he received a gold medal from the Photographische Gesellschaft Wien for his life's work. In 1963, the television station Westdeutscher Rundfunk in Cologne broadcast the documentary Portrait of the Photographer Albert Renger-Patzsch. In 1965, the Minister of Culture awarded to Renger-Patzsch the North Rhine-Westphalia state prize for artistic achievement. Also in 1965, the German photographer Lotte Jacobi showed Renger-Patzsch's photographs in her gallery in Deering, New Hampshire, and the Art Institute of Chicago included his works in its annual photography exhibition.

Albert Renger-Patzsch died on September 27, 1966 in Wamel. In December of that year, a memorial exhibition was mounted in the Ruhrland- und Heimatmuseum in Essen. In 1970 and 1971, commemorative exhibitions were held in Bremen and Hamburg.

Scope and Content of Collection

The archive documents Albert Renger-Patzsch's professional life and provides detailed information about his business-related activities, especially his work on book projects and private commissions for industrial firms. It also allows insight into his artistic views on photography and the technical details of his photographic workshop. A small portion of the archive consists of personal documents and family correspondence. Almost all items are in German; most are typescripts, or carbon copies of typescripts, especially letters by Albert Renger-Patzsch. Relatively few are in old German handwriting.

The main portion of the archive consists of post-war correspondence between Renger-Patzsch and numerous institutions, industrial firms, and individual correspondents. A relatively small part of the correspondence dates from the time before the war. Set apart is the predominantly business-related correspondence of Renger-Patzsch's widow Agnes and his son Ernst, and the personal correspondence of Albert Renger-Patzsch, mainly letters from his mother Frieda and other relatives. Two separate groups of correspondence are organized by topic.

Another significant portion of the archive presents ca. 30 drafts of mostly unpublished lectures and articles about photography by Albert Renger-Patzsch.

A large number of ephemeral publications, newspaper clippings and offprints related to Albert Renger-Patzsch provides information about the scope and reception of his photographic work before and after the war, his book projects, exhibitions, and other professional activities. Also included are a small number of personal documents related to Albert Renger-Patzsch and his family, a few portrait photographs taken by his daughter Sabine, poems by unknown authors, and business-related bills and receipts.

The archive includes several drafts of book texts by other authors: both texts about Renger-Patzsch and texts written to accompany Renger-Patzsch's books of photographs. Also in the archive are drafts of texts unrelated to Albert Renger-Patzsch, including 9 unpublished texts by the German ecologist Hugo Hertwig.

Series IA. Pre-war correspondence, 1924-1936 ca. 250 letters

Scope and Contents note:

Most of the letters are address to Renger-Patzsch, dating from 1924 to 1936, the time when Renger-Patzsch was working as a freelance photographer in Bad Harzburg and Essen and as instructor at the Folkwangschule in Essen. Included are primarily professional and business letters to Albert Renger-Patzsch from publishers, editors of photographic journals, literary authors, art critics, artists and other photographers. A few unidentified items are filed at the end of Box 1. The letters offer insight into the aesthetic appreciation of Renger-Patzsch's photographic work, and especially the reception of his book Die Welt is schön. Included is the unedited version of Thomas Mann's review of Die Welt is schön. The letters also provide information about Renger-Patzsch's participation in various photography exhibitions held in Germany and abroad. Also present is correspondence with various art schools, including the Folkwangschule in Essen and the Staatliche Bauhochschule Weimar, concerning offers of employment for Renger-Patzsch. Nearly half of the letters are typed.

Series I.B. Post-war correspondence, 1943-1966 7 Linear Feet

Scope and Contents note:

This portion of the archive dates from 1943 to 1966. During most of this time (from 1944 on), Renger-Patzsch lived with his wife Agnes and daughter Sabine in Wamel, near Soest in North Rhine-Westphalia. The majority of items are typescripts, or carbon copies of typescripts. Letters by Renger-Patzsch are predominantly carbon copies. The container list mentions substantial annotations, editing, sketches and other marks.

Unidentified post-war correspondence is filed in Box 15, F. 6. The post-war correspondence details Renger-Patzsch's professional life and provides insight into his views on photography as an art form, and on commercial photography in post-war Germany. The letters give information on the industrial, architectural and landscape photographs taken by Renger-Patzsch after the war and the reprinting and republishing of his salvaged pre-war work. They also offer insight into the production of his various publications and exhibitions and his lecturing activities.

A major part of this section comprises business correspondence with numerous industrial firms, publishing houses and cultural organizations. Over 530 items constitute correspondence with the chemical concern C. H. Boehringer Sohn in Ingelheim, which between 1946 and 1966 commissioned and financed several of Renger-Patzsch's privately printed books. Other industrial firms significantly represented in the archive are Schubert & Salzer in Ingolstadt; Deutsche Spinnereimaschinenbau AG in Ingolstadt; Jenaer Glaswerk Schott & Gen. [later renamed Schott Glaswerke, filed under Schott, Erich]; Essener Steinkohlenbergwerke; Deutsche Spiegelglas A.G.; Werkstätten J. Dickerhoff in Bochum; Th. Goldschmidt AG in Essen; Knoll International in Stuttgart; Presswerk AG in Essen; and Riedel & Co. in Bielefeld.

Among the individual correspondents are editors, scholars, art historians, architects, and other photographers. Of particular interest is the correspondence (ca. 74 items) with the German-born British photographer, collector and photographic historian Helmut Gernsheim, with whom Renger-Patzsch exchanges opinions about current trends in photography, especially commercial photography, and discusses the relationship between photography and art. Another significant portion represents the correspondence with the German art historian Carl Georg Heise. Heise's letters detail his own editing and writing activities, and include critical reviews of Renger-Patzsch's photographic work, book projects and writings. Also rich in intellectual discussions on photography, art and other cultural topics is the correspondence with the architect Karl Freckmann, the photographer and writer Ernst Fuhrmann, the Austrian art historian and photographer Viktor Fürst, the ecologist Hugo Hertwig, the German-American photographer and art dealer Lotte Jacobi, Ilse Marie von Scheven (book dealer in Hamm and literary critic), the architect Rudolf Schwarz, Käthe Smith (wife of Ronald Gregor Smith, a theology professor in Glasgow), the photographer Dieter Steffen, and the German philologist Peter Wapnewski.

One topic frequently addressed by Renger-Patzsch in these letters is his appreciation of Hugo Erfurth's portrait photography. Renger-Patzsch frequently writes about his efforts to find a publisher for a book about Erfurth. His correspondence with editors of publishing houses, especially the Insel-Verlag and the Hans Peters Verlag, shows the changing market for photography books in Germany during the 1950s and 1960s.

The post-war correspondence also details Renger-Patzsch's involvement as a board member of the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Photographie, an association of professional photographers. Letters between Renger-Patzsch and Fritz L. Gruber, Helmut Gernsheim, Carl Georg Heise, and the publisher of Foto Prisma, Wilhelm Schöppe, provide insight into the process of nominating the candidate for the association's annual culture prize, and reveal Renger-Patzsch's opinions about the work of other contemporary photographers, especially Bill Brandt, August Sander, and Otto Steinert.

Box 7

Folder 2

Scope and Contents note:

44 items (on 47 leaves), including 22 by R.P.: correspondence between R.P. and the German-born British photographer, collector, and photographic historian. The letters convey their vivid exchange of views on photography and other photographers: Man Ray, László Moholy-Nagy, Florence Henry, Henri Cartier-Bresson, Bill Brandt, Alfred Stieglitz, Edward Steichen, Eugène Atget, Eduard Steinert and Erich Salomon. They discuss their current projects and the relationship between photography and painting. In his letter from Dec. 1, 1958, Gernsheim relates photographs by R.P., Helmar Lerski and Erna Lendvai-Dircksen to New Objectivity, and mentions in this context his own books New photo vision, Beautiful London and Masterpieces of Victorian photography, and Karl Blossfeld's Urformen der Kunst. Of particular interest is R.P.'s letter from Dec. 6, 1958, in which he describes his concept of atmosphere in photography as a formal expression ["... Stimmung eine Funktion der Form .."] and writes about his book Im Wald [1945]. In his letter from Jan. 14, 1959, R.P. mentions the two 1928 editions of Die Welt ist schön. In his letter from Jan. 29, 1959, Gernsheim comments on an article about his collection of photographs published in Kunstwerk. Two letters from Gernsheim to his wife concern a daguerreotype attributed by R.P. to Carl Ferdinand Stelzner. Gernsheim letter also mentions his professional contacts with Beaumont Newhall, Ansel Adams and Rube Goldberg.

Folder 3

Scope and Contents note:

30 items (on 38 leaves), including 6 by R.P.: this folder continues correspondence between R.P. and Gernsheim contained in folder 2. Both discuss their concepts of photography, comment on current trends in photography, especially in commercial photography in Germany; and exchange their opinions about candidates for the annual culture prize of the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Photographie, especially Otto Steinert, August Sander and L. Fritz Gruber. In his letter from Jan. 1, 1961, Gernsheim relates the work of the American photographer Paul Strand to New Objectivity. Gernsheim's letters frequently concern his failed attempts to establish a museum of photography in Cologne, and involvement with documentary television programs. In his letter from Jan. 20, 1960, Gernsheim comments on the current political situation and on anti-Semitism in Germany. Several letters concern Gernsheim's offer to acquire R.P.'s photographic estate, including all negatives, and to integrate it with the Gernsheim collection in Austin, Texas. Of Gernsheim's letter from Dec. 14, 1965, only leaves 1 and 2 are present.

^ Return to Table of ContentsSeries V. Ephemera, 1927-1980 circa 345 itemsScope and Contents note:*

This series contains ephemeral publications predominantly related to Albert Renger-Patzsch. It is organized in three subseries: Press clippings, Offprints and other printed ephemera, and Lists of photographs and books.

Series V.A. Press clippings, 1927-1980 ca. 274 items*Scope and Contents note:*

Press Clippings includes ca. 270 loose press clippings, and 4 notebooks. The notebooks were compiled by Renger-Patzsch before the war, possibly during the early 1930s. Each notebook contains a large number of pasted-in press clippings of reviews and illustrations dating from ca. 1927 to 1931. A large part of Renger-Patzsch's archive at the Museum Folkwang in Essen was destroyed during an air raid in 1944, so many of the press illustrations in the note books are the only remaining reproductions of Renger-Patzsch's pre-war photographs. The reviews provide information about the reception of his pre-war work, book projects, exhibitions, and other professional activities. The loose press clippings date from 1960 to 1966 and are arranged by topic: the Photokina 1960, the 1960 Culture Prize awarded to Renger-Patzsch, his obituaries, and commemorative exhibitions. The majority was sent to Renger-Patzsch from the clipping service "Der Ausschnitt" in Berlin-Lichterfelde. Miscellaneous press clippings, some unrelated to Renger-Patzsch, are filed in Box 19, F. 8 and 9.
